

A Story of Self-setting Sudoku #4 by Thomas Snyder

The fourth level of self-setting is “High Setting Automation”. The editor relaxes as an automated, intelligent process (AI) generates grids that are then passed to a second AI the editor has set up to reject almost everything that is not an outlier, since corner cases may be the only interesting things left to search for. When needed, the editor still acts to reject unfriendly logic before publishing.

Exciting news! We’ll show off “Full Setting Automation” by tomorrow.
